National Irrigation Congress Takes Up the Theme at Chicago---Addresses Made by Notable Members.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

"HICAGO, Nov. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Men from all sections of the country, interested in reclaiming the arid lands of the West by irrigation, gathered tonight in the Central Music Hall. The meeting marked the opening of the ninth annual convention of the National Irrigation Congress. The Western States were very largely represented by delegations; many came from the South, and several from the Eastern

In the words spoken by President Blwood Mead, by George H. Maxwell, chairman of the Executive Council, and by J. M. Wilson, the irrigation expert stationed at Reno, Nev., the hopes and plans of the organization were set forth at the outset. Progress is proclaimed by the officers since the last meeting, and great development is found in public sentiment since the inaugural meeting held in Salt Lake City en years ago.

President Mead declared the congress of 1900 open at 8 o'clock. After the invocation, Dr. Howard S. Tavor, responding for the Mayor, delivered the address of welcome, and alluded to Chicago's great drainage canal as an evidence that the citizens were intensely interested in the affairs of the congress.

Committeeman Maxwell, after reading the call for the congress, said:

"We turn our faces to the setting sun and behold the West, a vast territory still waiting to be subdued for the purposes of men; a territory capable of sustaining more people than the whole United States contains today if the waters that now run waste in the western rivers can be saved and used to make the

"We must take not only as our motto, Save the forests and store the floods,' but add two other principles: That the remaining public lands shall be sacredly for the home builder, and that the right to water for irrigation shall belong to the land it irrigates."

President Mead, in his response for the congress to the address of welcome, delivered his annual address. He reviewed the history and the work accomplished by the association, and said among other things: "It is now realized that the watering of these deserts is not solely a problem for the States; that the nation has certain duties and responsibilities, and that there such action that irrigation is a western problem, and that since the control of the water supply had passed to the States the control of the lands should follow, and that to do this would be to secure a higher degree of intelligence and greater expedition in putting both to use than would be possible with an administration located in Washington. There were some who disagreed with this view, and urged as a compromise a further investigation of the problems a further investigation of the problems of irrigation by the Department of

"For several years the succeeding Congresses followed closely in the line of the first one, urging the improve revolution in existing conditions which it provided for was too great. Although it failed to become a law, it had had an enduring influence on irrigation thought. It ended the policy of doing nothing. The solution which it presented was one which all could understand. It rested with those who opposed it to present a substitute. This was not as easy as it seemed, and since that time the West has been studying this subject as never before. "While no question has yet arisen of

"While no question has yet arisen of greater importance than the necessity of securing such changes as will unite land and water under one control, other questions besides ceding the public lands to the States have finally relegated this to a subordinate position. It is now realised that watering these deserts is not solely a problem for the States; that the nation has certain duties and responsibilities and that there are certain questions which require national legislation and oversight. The need of national laws grows out of the fact that in the West it is water and not land which is of overshadowing importance. Many western rivers are interstate streams. The laws of the States through which they flow differ widely in character, while in some they are both madequate and dangerous.

NEW TORK, Nov. 31.—According to the highest official authority, says a Herald special from Washington, events are hurrying the United States to a point where, in the interest of humanity and a satisfactory solution of the Chinese question, it must withdraw from the concert of nations.

It is not intended by the administration to be hasty in adopting such a course. Pair warning will be given to the powers, and if they still persist in a policy calculated to drive China to desperation, the only thing left for the administration will be to enter into independent negotiations with the imperial government. Such a course would undoubtedly be followed by Russis and France, but the action of Great Britain, Germany and Japan is problematical because of their recent agreement.

Daiquiri yesterday and returned to this city on horseback, following the route of the army in the summer of 1886. Gen. Wood acted as guide and showed the points of special interest on the various battlefields explaining the strategy used by the American commanders. Secretary Root was intensely interested in the Guasimas battlefield, the scene of the first hard fight of the Rough Riders, where Capt. Allyn K. Capron and Sergt. Hamilton Fish, Jr., were among the killed.

Returning to this city, they were entertained at luncheon as the guests of Menendez & Co. on board the steamer Reina De Los Angeles, which was made a prise during the war. Secretary Root, responding to a toast to his health, said in part:

"I am visiting Cuba as the representative of Fresident McKinley for the purpose of making an investigation of its inhabitants, particularly with reference to their ability to govern themselves. From newspaper reports, I had come to imagine that the Cubans were only partially civilized, and I am agreeably surprised to find an enlightened people. I desire to renew the assurances of the good faith of the United States government, which will fulfull its promises, and I expect soon to see a free, self-governing republic in Cuba."

Hursen was born in Vicksburg, Mich., in 1860. He is the inventor and promoter of many novelties, and had accumulated a considerable fortune at the time of his death. His first effort was with the wire jewelry. The slender strands were manipulated by him into lovers' knots, initials, names and other forms, and though the idea was quickly appropriated by others, it netted him a large sum. Later the inventor stumbled on the idea of the picture button. In a short time thousands of the buttons were on the market. The miniatures yielded a fortune.

The low land is frost bitten, the high land is dry, and last year there was not a bushel of beans raised, though acres were planted and cultivated. The corn was killed when it was yet green. It Acts as a Bar to Work the on Nicaraguan Waterway.

(NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS-A.M.) NEW YORK, Nov. 2L-The dministration, according to a World special from Washington, regards the Clayton-Bulwer treaty as still in effect and a bar to iethmian canal legislation, unless modified as provided in the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. This latter treaty failed of ratification in the Senate last winter.

The ratification of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty will be insisted upon as an essential preliminary to the enactment of a law providing for the waterway. In administration circles it is believed that this treaty will be ratified at the coming session. The Hepburn bill does not recognize the Clayton-Bulwer treaty as being longer operative, and will be opposed by adminis-tration leaders on that account. No treaties will be pegotiated with any of the Central American governments for right-of-way concessions until the Senate disposes of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

a fruitful source of litigation and social disturbance, unless in some way the conflicting rights and warring policies can be reconciled and adjusted. No subject connected with irrigation surpasses this in importance. Throughout the arid region, land without water is of little value. The rivers on which its fertility depends are the dominating feature of western development, and the whole future social and industrial life of every irrigated district is destined to be shaped by the manner in which rights to rivers are secured and the nature of the ownership of their waters, which is ultimately recognized. Few who have not studied this questions. waters, which is ultimately recognized.

Few who have not studied this question can realize at the outset the complexity and importance of the issueconnected with legislation for the control of western rivers.

NEW STARTING PLACE.

lowstone Park rises a lofty peak which has been appropriately named Mt. Union, because it is the starting place of the future of vilication of the West. Down its lofty sides flow three streams which, with their tributaries, furnish the water supply for a region larger than many European countries and which, in the future, is destined to be the home of unnumbered millions of people. These streams are the headwaters of the Missouri, the Columbia and the Colorado. The first is the future water supply of a large part of Wyoming, Montana and the Dakotas. The second crosses Idaho and Eastern Oregon, and the third finds its lonesome way through the caffons and deserts of Colorado, Utah and Arisons.

"One finally empties into the Gulf of Mexico, another into the Pacific Ocean and the third into the Pacific Ocean and the third into the Pacific Ocean and the third into the Gulf of California. The valleys of these rivers are recent decision of the United States Supreme Court has asserted the authority of the Federal government to interfere with the use of water in irrigation whenever such use injuriously affects the interests of navigation. All these conflicting laws and policies apply to the same water supply, and they can only be reconciled through national legislation.

NATIONAL COMMISSION.

"The Irrigation Congress has been seeking for years to secure consideration of this question, and as a solution has urged the creation of a national commission, whose duty it would be to study the question and outline a policy acceptable allike to the nation and to the several Statea. Nothing, however, came of this. Western representatives in Congress found it easier to utilise agencies already existing, than to create new ones, and instead of creating a new bureau, have invoked the assistance of a number of those already in existence. The United States Department of Agriculture has inaugurated a comprehensive investigation of irrigation laws and methods. The hydrographic division of the Geological Survey has been intrusted with the gauging of streams, and the location and survey of sites for the storage of surplus waters. The War Department has made an investigation of the necessity and importance of storage reservoirs. Forest reserves are being established, and forest protection has become a recognized feature of the national government.

"The last two meetings of the Irrigation Congress have shown the influence of this growing interest and effort on the part of the national government. Public sentiment in the West is changing in favor of direct appropriations of money from the national treasury for the construction of storage works and the building of canais of too great magnitude or cost for private enterprise. If this aid is extended under such conditions as will unite with the ownership of land a share in the stream on which its value depends, it will mark the beginning of an economic reform of immense significance. Examples of such united ownership will be more potent than precept or argument, and will insure the downfall of speculative ownership of streams. NATIONAL COMMISSION.

Down town business was almost stopped by the rain, and many places of barter were closed hours before their usual time.

But withal, there was a merry side to the storm. It would be hard to find a Californian who would grumble over the rain, and yesterday many a grumbler was squeiched by the rain-soaked plooneers who gloried in the downnour.

blocked traffic on both the and Santa Monica lines. TROLLEY PRANKS. TROLLEY PRANES.

The moisture played queer pranks with the insulation on trolley cars and other electric apparatus. Beveral ef the passengers on car No. 67 of the Los Angeles-Pacific Railway Company's line which left Santa Monica at 5 p.m., received slight shocks. C. L. Powell was jarred by a few volts of the fluid passing through his umbrella. Dr. Wiebers felt the thrill as he chanced to stand over some of the metal works on the floor of the car.

Boyle Heights received its share of the rain, and on First street, east of Cummings atreet there was no street car traffic after 4 o'clock in the afternon. Fand was washed on the tracks until it was impossible for the cars to pass. The same condition was evident on West Seventh street early in the ofternoon, and sand at the corner of Becond street and Broadway stopped all car traffic there after 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

DEEP-WATER NAVIGATION.

The flooded condition of the streets compelled pedestrians to do a great deal of deep-water navigating. The trippling of the street-car service made walking necessary in many instances, and the only way of crossing the treets was by wading. People about lown with shoes full of water were not mocommon.

Three cabs were stranded on Aliso street last evening, and two met with the same fate on Pico Heighta. Deep mud in the streets was the cause of their being delayed.

The young son of George Legassick, a painter living at No. 613 Burton street, narrowly escaped being drowned yesterday near the Bixteenth-street school.

When the school let out for the afternoon, the adjacent streets were in animpassable condition. The firemen from No. 14 on Bixteenth street, turned out and carried the children agross. Lagassick, Jr., having reached the mature age of 5, objected to being carried like a girl. He resolved to wade through himself.

In the middle of the street he was swept off his feet, and went merrily floating down the wash. He was full of water and exhausted when Fireman

A telephone message from the power plant of the Edison Electric Company, in the Santa Ana Cañon, at an early hour this morning, reported the river out of its banks and carrying 56,000 inches of water. No damage had been done to the power plant, however, and none was anticipated.

A message from the San Gabriel Electric Company's plant in the San Gabriel Cañon at 10 o'clock reported 10,000 inches of water flowing out of the mouth of the cañon. No damage had been done by the flood at that point.

INCIDENTS OF THE FLOOD.

HUMOROUS STREET SCENES.

The evening was replete with incidents, varying from farce comedy to tragedy, but a final good-natured laugh brought out the humor of nearly all of the performances, and even the principal actors treated their sundry unpremeditated actions lightly, few becoming disgruntled, although some smiled shamefacedly after doing a "turn." The beauty of these impromptu sketches lay in their originality and spontaneity. There was nothing studied about them—nothing of the living picture, carefully posed. They were spontaneous and realistic and sensibly affected the audience with strong emotions. HUMOROUS STREET SCENES.

living picture, carefully posed. They were spontaneous and realistic and sensibly affected the audience with strong emotions.

The success of one young woman who did a turn on Spring street near Second was testified to by resounding cheers. It was shortly after 6 o'clock and the street was crowded with an audience of home-seekers, who thronged the doorways and other dry places of vantage, generally waiting for the car which came not. The water gushed by in the gutter, reaching nearly to the car tracks when the heroine attired in a natty suit of gray, alighted from a passing car. Standing solitarily upon a little island of asphalt, she surveyed askance the unfordable stream. Threatened simultaneously by the rising water and starvation, she cast imploring glances at the interested spectators who stood with inert arms tenderly contemplating the unconscious central figure of "beauty and the elements." Suddenly from a nearby doorway a dapper clerk rushed to her rescue. With true knight-errantry he threw an empty wooden box into the middle of the river. This steepping stone, however, being unweighted, promptly floated down stream with the pretty girl in hot pursuit. Using her parasol as a boat hook, with great desterity and the free exposition of delsarte exercises, she finally grounded the imponderous buoy, stepped triumphantly upon it, poised herself for a spring, and, making a lightning change depicted a sportive mermaid in muddy water. As she swam ashore she explained with feeling that the box had broken with her weight. As it still encircled her left ankle this was not doubted by anyone excepting only the clerk. Turning to him, she girgied a few words of appropriate and sideguate thanks and passed on.

An extremely corpulent man, evidently fired by reading the story of the recent birth in this country, under difficulties, of a baby elephant, essayed a very successful sjector representing the tiny monster being buffeted by the waves of motherly affection. He had been patiently awaiting, for some time, the second ble to land her passengers, was again under way. A rush, a jump, a splash, a thump, a great and earnest wallowing about in the billowy tide, combined with a plaintive trumpeting of inarticulate but unchristianilke vocal sounds, was greatly appreciated by the audience, who applauded vociferously. The baby bowed his thanks but well and the property of the property o of the minds of the people all fear that any sort of governmental policy in any way inimical to the finances or business or prosperity of the country may be adopted. A very great factor in our future development, which our people are soon to discover, will appear in the building up of the ports of trade on the Pacific Coast, which will be so extensive and rapid in progress that the Atlantic ports will before long begin to feel the competition of the western coast of our country. Our grasp of the Philippine Islands, and the foothold in trade, and greater share of confidence in our distinterestedness as regards territorial encroachment which is fast gaining in the Chinese empire, will finally consummate the preparations for as great business and prosperity for the Pacific Coast States as have heretofore been enjoyed by those of the Atlantic Coast. Soon a part of the trade and commerce of the Eastern States will be brought into competition with that of the great Pacific Coast, insomuch that it will appear that indeed 'Westward the star of empire takes its way.' It is the foresight of such change in the Pacific States that has produced such a pronounced electoral result this November."

Inasmuch as this Coast is to be the mational bragging from your caption to your signature, nevertheless, I will condenge.

What say you, O my lords and ladies intellectual, to the simple statement that during the fiscal year ending in July last, the net ordinary revenues of our Uncle Samuel were $567,-240,852, the largest in the history of the country, exceeding those of 1866, the next highest, by $47,291,288. The increase of $51,280,222 over the preceding year was contributed from all the general sources, but chiefly from customs and internal revenue. On the side of the expenditures there was a net decrease of $117,353,388, in comparison with 1899, so that the deficiency of $39,-111,560 for that year was converted into a surplus of $79,527,060 in 1900. The gross receipts under warrant, including those on account of the public debt, were $1,387,299,262. The largest receipts for a single day were $5,199,513. The largest surplus on any one day was $4,047,396 (August 29; pretty good for a hot day;) But let me quote directly from the report:

"Exclusive of the reserve fund, the available cash balance of the treasury was greater June 30, 1900, by $24,837,193 than at the same date in 1899, but this gain was partly offset by a decrease of $3,63,273 in the next ensuing quarter. The cash assets beyond liabilities were $4,97,22,017, June 30, 1899; $50,327,502 June 30, 1900, and $41,183,160 October 1, 1900.

"As the receipts of the treasury were wise during the day there will be the tramp, tramp of the sojer boys along our via sacré. Pennsylvania svenue, and at the Capitol, the President will review these guardians of our military glory. The morning ceremonies will start with a reception by some dozen committees of our representative citizens at the White House, where Governors of States will be welcomed, and told all we know about the executive mansion from the days when Mrs. Adams hung her laundry to dry in the Eose room, to that date in the near future when two wings will arise as a nextension to the abode of our chief magistrate. The enlargement of the historic mansion is to be made according to a most ingenious and esthetic suggestion of Mrs. Harrison, and will not detract from, but greatly add to the dignity and beauty of the edifice, in the same manner that the wings of the Capitol have enhanced its importance. As for the actual need of the space within, that is a matter which admits of no dispute; and the old house is no longer safe as a resort of great crowds. Those that go down to the sea in ships are in hardly less peril than those who brave the pressure of throngs on staircases which are attached to interior walls at the White House of contemporaneous service with Mrs. Adams's laundry.

The Adamses will be greatly to the forefront in the coming celebration. A historic medial will be cast, on whose face will be seen the words:

"John Adams, 1800—William McKinley, the former overlapping, while surrounding the faces will be seen the words:

"John Adams, 1800—William McKinley, 1900." Among the notable guests invited are four greet grandsons of Joha-Adams. The President who occupied the White House one hundred years—ago. Two of our contemporate neous Adamses are literary men, and reside in Washington; and two reside in Boston, which is equivalent to the assertion that they are 'men of light and leading' in fields of intellectual endeavor. NEW FLANNELS.

Every Attractive Kind.

This week we show the greatest assortment of Flannels we have ever gathered together. New ones, late styles and colorings. Flannels that are exceptionally pretty and attractive. The colors run to those pretty, soft pastel shadings in blues, greens, pinks, grays, castors, lavenders, old rose and light blues. The brighter, heavier colors are represented by the navies, myrtles, garnets, wines, cardinals, etc.

These pretty styles are found not only in all-wool French Flannels, but among the new arrivals in the cotton Outing Flannels, Ederdowns and Flannelettes, of which there is such a variety this season.

And then he turned and grinned with haif-shut eyes at the lawyers on the other side. That is the way some men take a victory, because Arthur Rivers, the first of the State's witnesses, had just testified that it was Perez, not Yglesias, who fired the first shot of the street fight.

There was all the bitterness of an old feud in the preliminary examination of Manuel Yglesias, principal, and Genaro Yglesias, accessory. Two of the foremost criminal lawyers of Southern California are in the lists to fight is out to the deadly end, Barl Rogers, Esq., for the defense, and Horace Appel, Esq., to assist Deputy District Attorney Chambers in pressing the case against the two Yglesiaes.

Before the case was half an hour old, there were broad insinuations of crooked dealing, and it was the heat of fighting from the call of the case. It is the game of law played for all it was worth by men who know every feint and parry and pitfall.

The courtroom was filled with Mexicans, who are sympathisers with Feries or Yglesiae, and glowsred at the rival clan.

that he saw four men.

"One of them drew his gun and pointed it too near my direction, so I put on the juice and got the car out of the way," said Mr. Brown, grinning delightedly at the recollection.

He told how he saw one man being pulled in the doorway of the store of Kappare Cohn; saw a man on the sidewalk, who must have been Ygiesias, strike the man in the doorway, who must have been Peres, twice on the brasst, and saw the man in the hall draw a pistol.

That was all he saw, He didn't hang around to see any more. "Some of these worm highbinders, I suppose," said Mr. Appel, witheringly, for the Ygiesias outfit had a suite in which were Deputy Constable Mugnemi and Police Officer Talamantes and others.

The way is not into the sidewalk traw at all?"

"Did you see the man on the sidewalk draw at all?"

"Did you see the man on the sidewalk draw at all?"

"I didn't welt."

"I did not."

"Had he drawn when you got out of the way?"

walk draw at all?

"Had he drawn when you got out of the way?"

"I don't know," said Mr. Brown with caution.

"Tou didn't see him?"

"No."

In reply to a question by the presecution on redirect examination. Brown said that he was in such a position that he could not see the hands of Yziesias.

As for demeanor, Morris Klins, the book-keeper for Cohn, struck an average with Mr. Brown, when he was called as a witness.

Mr. Kline did not laugh. It seemed as though he will never laugh again. Mr. Kline told his story through a cloud of gloom.

He was working at the books in Cohn's front office that day, when he heard a body fall against the door. He got up to investigate, but the pistol shots began to bask and he decided to take the same general course of action as Brown. He though he could get sufficient details from the newspapers afterward without wasting time in a personal investigation.

THEY SPRINTED.

But he did not think of himself alone. He called to the office boy to fly with him out the back door and got there before Kline. Once outside he shut the door and not there office boy and he bedy?"

Yes, Mr. Kline saw a man.

Could he have gotten through onto New High street that way? Yes, Mr. Kline thought so; yes, Mr. Kline was sure of it.

Now, it is a fact that Genaro Ygiesias! called as a witness.

Mr. Kline told his story through again.

struck by resemblances to leading features of known Mycesean palaces. Stillman, in 1881, identified the building as the "Labyrinth" of mythological fame, and now. Mr. Evans, after a careful and complete excavation of one-half of the site, finds that both Fabricius and Stillman were right.

A striking comirmation is found in the sculptured double-ax abounding on the square gypum stones used in the construction of this Mycenean palace, of the explanation of the Labyrinth as meaning the House of the Double-ax. This same double-ax supplied a well-known epithet to Zeus in Caria, and figures in both the linear and the pictorial alphabets of Mr. Evans's discoveries as a significant character. Chossos, then, was the site of the House of the Double-ax, which was also the palace of the Cretan King Minos, whose authenticated relations with Caria and the Carians make the designation of his palace by the Carian name of Labyrinth a very natural one. The part of the palace laid bare by Mr. Evans reveals a complex of walls, not yet sufficiently studied to yield a determinate ground-plan. The material used for most of the partition wall was rough-quarried stones, compacted together with a clayey compound, and there is a plentiful use of something not unlike whitewash upon wall surfaces. The more solid walls, however, are often built of beautifully-squared gypnum blocks, superior in their workmanship, even to the much-admired walls of the sixth Trojan city, identified with Homer's Ilium. Sills and pillars are all of stone, as far as the first story reaches. There are unmistakable signs of numerous wooden columns which rested on stone bases that are still well preserved. There was an upper part of the building made of wood.

The whole of the excavated portion of this palace of Minos falls into two unequal parts, extending to the east and west of a long and narrow corridor, which runs nearly due north and south. Opening upon this corridor are a series of long and narrow was supper part of the building made of the supplied to one p

From 50 to 61 degrees Pahrenheit is approximately the correct temperature for the best growth. Too much heat causes the mushrooms to grow too fast and coarse.

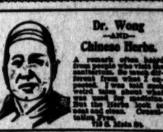

"A bed in a cellar will usually yield mushrooms for two or three months, or even longer. In a greenhouse, where the atmosphere is not so damn, the beds need frequent watering, which constantly exhausts the beds and diminishes the growth of the fungus. The prices that this artificially-raised product brings range from thirty cents to $1.55 in the fancy markets.

Overhauled in View of Her Going Aground at Annapolis.

BY THE NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.I BALTIMORE (Md.) Nov. 21.—The new torpedo boat Stockton, which has been undergoing her trial in Chesapeake Bay, off Patuxent River, has been brought to a Baltimore shipyard to be overhauled, prior to her final test. The Stockton, while en route from the William R. Trigg Company's yards at Richmond, Va., to Annapolis, was blown aground, entering the Annapolis harbor several days ago.

She was gotten off without apparent damage to her hull, but it was deemed best to overhaul the vessel before she enters upon her speed trial. It is thought that the minor repairs that may be necessary will be completed by Friday. The date of the final speed trial, which was set for Thursday of this week, is contingent upon the length of time required to overhaul the next ship.

Velvet Coats Worth from $50.00 to $100.00 to be Sold at $25.00 to $49.00

The manager of our cloak and suit department has found it neccessary to visit New York a second time. The garments he purchaster trip were so pleasing to our patrons that very few of them are left. The stock which we had expected to last until Christmas was the 15th of this month. This increase in our cloak business proves again and more conclusively than ever that the Hamburger met buying and selling of merchandise is the only correct one. It also proves that the selections of our buyer met with approval. New York City at this time it is possible to secure bargains in merchandise which can not be had earlier in the season. For instance Our buyer secured a line of exquisitely tailored dresses at exactly half price. They come in a variety of materials, sizes and and there are no two alike. These suits sold regularly at $50.00 to $100.00 each, and they come from one of New York's largest in of Paris costumes. The styles are entirely new in Los Angeles. We have had nothing like them before. It is impossible to describ particularly because the variety of styles equals the number of suits. Enough to say that you will have them at half price, range $49.00 down to $20.00 a suit.

In addition to the dresses our buyer secured some very handsome velvet coats. They are the very newest garments of the seaso pretty to wear with handsome silk skirts over fancy waists. There are no two coats exactly alike, and they are worth from $50.00 to We have marked them for this sale at prices ranging from $49.00 down to $25.00.

ular before Christmas. They are lavishly in black and white and in colors. Squassize, cloth bound, stamped with attractive four color inks and silver. Ideal gifts for and young people. Choose from the foliat 25c.
